NOTES IN SEASON.

LITTLE, BROWN & CO. have in preparation "Curb, Snaffle, and Spur," training for young men for the cavalry service, by Edward L. Anderson.

ROBERTS BROTHERS make the welcome announcement that they have in preparation an edition of Molière's works translated by Miss K. P. Wormeley, whose excellent translations of Balzac's works have given such universal satisfaction.

D. C. HEATH & CO. are about to issue Pailleron's "Le monde où l'on s'ennuie," a delightfully witty comedy—a masterpiece in its way—edited with notes, by Prof. A. C. Pendleton, Bethany College, W. Va. This will prove an entertaining text for second year reading, and very well suited for oral practice in the class-room.

HENRY HOLT & CO. have just added to their dainty series of linen-covered volumes a new book by Anthony Hope, entitled "A Change of Air." It is a dramatic tale which, while characterized by the snap and humor of the author's "The Prisoner of Zenda," and not devoid of excitement, has a tragic undercurrent, and without sermonizing teaches a lesson of moderation and charity.

HOUGHTON, MIFFLIN & CO. will publish shortly "A Story of Courage: annals of the Georgetown Convent of the Visitation," by George Parsons Lathrop. They will also issue at once John Fiske's "History of the United States for Schools." This will be an important work, giving an insight into certain phases of the history of our land which generally escape the school historian, and also made valuable by full bibliographical lists and suggestive aids to collateral reading, prepared by Frank A. Hill, who did such excellent work of similar character in Fiske's "Civil Government." The book will have an abundance of illustrations and admirably executed maps.

T. Y. CROWELL & CO. will add to their Illustrated Library a complete and accurate translation of Dumas' "Monte Cristo," in two volumes, with illustrations by Frank T. Merrill. They have also nearly ready a two-volume edition of Dumas' "Three Musketeers," translated from the latest edition, with 250 illustrations by Maurice Leloir; and a new and authorized "Life and Inventions of Edison," by W. K. L. and Antonia Dickson. They will publish in the early fall a new book by Mrs. Sarah K. Bolton, entitled "Some Famous Leaders Among Men." This new addition to her remarkably successful series of Famous Books for Young People will deal with the lives of Napoleon, Nelson, General Sherman, Thomas Arnold, Canon Kingsley, Wendell Phillips, Spurgeon, Phillips Brooks, and other notable men of this century. It will be fully illustrated.

POSTAL MATTERS.

EXTRA NUMBERS OF SERIAL "LIBRARIES" SUBJECT TO THIRD-CLASS RATES.

THE third Assistant Postmaster recently issued instructions to the effect that "extra" numbers of serial library publications are not regarded as permissible "extra editions" within the intent of Section 286 Postal Laws and Regulations.

Under Section 286 Postal Laws and Regulations, permissible extra editions must be issued for the purpose of communicating additional current news, or information germane to the publication as originally issued. Extra numbers of serial library publications, not being issued for the purpose of communicating additional current news or information relating to the publication, are therefore subject to the third-class rate of postage.

Peter Gaveston's young and beautiful wife, after being married six years meets an old lover and is saved from eloping with him by her adored child, prompted to his methods by her brilliant young sister. Fashionable country-house society does not appear at its best in this story of misunderstood guardians and gossiping ladies of title.

Hamilton and Bradhurst become rivals for the love of Hamilton's ward. The scene shifts to Trouville, France, where many doubts affecting the fair fame of the heroine are finally put to rest. Hamilton is a psychological study. The heroine sacrifices herself throughout for the best good of her husband's health and his art career.

Robert Briscoe, who offers him work at his station, where he falls in love with Briscoe's daughter. The interference of a wealthy suitor causes a stormy scene, and Rolf leaves Yeronaga. His story after this is highly romantic.

Grimm, Jacob L. and W: C. Fairy tales; ed. by Sara E. Wiltse; il. by Caroline S. King. Pt. 1. Bost., Ginn & Co., 1894. c. 4+237 p. il. D. (Classics for children.) cl., 50 c.; bds., 35 c. [2377

Undertakes an eliminating process, by which all stories with bad morals, evil motives, magic interpositions in favor of idlers and tricksters, cruel stepmothers and unnatural fathers are entirely excluded. The editor has taken some liberties in bringing about certain changes in plot or phrase needed to preserve the eternal spirit of love and justice which educators have decided should alone be inculcated in children's literature.

Hawes, A. Clifford. The muse poetic. New Bedford, Mass., A. Clifford Hawes, 1893 [1894.] c. '93. 2-91 p. por. D. cl., $1. [2378

The author, who is professor of history in the Worcester Polytechnic Institute, traces the beginning of representation and suffrage from the days when Massachusetts was a religious oligarchy and church membership a condition of citizenship, through the manifold changes by which tolerance in religion at last found a footing among the pilgrims and the suffrage was given regardless of personal creed.

Hawaii: a novel; il. by M. Colin. [Also] The stolen veil. N. Y., Rob. Bonner's Sons, [1894.] c. 4-244; 63 p. D. (Ledger lib., no. 114.) cl., $1; pap., 50 c. [2380

The story deals with the recent revolution in Hawaii, the deposition of Queen Liuokalani, the founding of the provisional government under President Dole, and the offer of the Hawaiian Islands to the United States. The principal characters are Americans, strongly in favor of annexation. There are graphic descriptions of native life.

Howells, W: D. The garroters: farce. N. Y., Harper, 1894. c. '85, '94. 3-90 p. T. (Harper's black and white ser.) cl., 50 c. [2381

Mr. Roberts reaches home in wild excitement; he has been robbed of his watch by garroters on Boston Common, has valiantly attacked the enemy and recaptured the watch. Mrs. Roberts goes into ecstasies over her husband's prowess. Suddenly Mr. Roberts finds himself possessed of two watches; the point of view is changed, and the sprightly little farcical explanation ends with an exquisite little dinner just beginning.

Hudson, W: H: Introduction to the philosophy of Herbert Spencer; with biographical sketch. N. Y., Appleton, 1894. c. 10+234 p. D. cl., $1.25. [2382

The book is largely the outgrowth of lectures on the subject of evolution in which the interest is constantly spreading. The personality and writings of Herbert Spencer, the significance of his philosophy as affecting conduct, society, and religion are tersely expounded, and an estimate given of the important place he occupies in the scientific world. Mr. Hudson is associate professor of English literature in the Leland Stanford Junior University.

Hunt, Violet. The maiden's progress: a novel in dialogue. N. Y., Harper, 1894. c. 2+252 p. D. cl., $1. [2383

A clever novel, in which the characters literally "speak for themselves," for the story is told entirely in dialogue or soliloquy. The maiden is introduced on the eve of her "coming-out" ball, and is carried from the tremors and gushings of the débutante to the aplomb of the woman of the world. Moderna is a fin de siècle girl of the "Dodo" type. She is rich, radical, eccentric, goes to Bohemian clubs, indulges in skirt-dancing, journalism, and art, and is "quite independent—quite." She becomes at last disillusionized, tired of "independence," and her "progress" naturally ends with the conclusion of her career as a "bachelor-girl." Fashionable London society life is excellently sketched. There are many characters, and the dialogue is frequently witty and sparkling.

Lorimer, G: C., D.D. Conversion: a series of lecture-room talks; with introd. by Rev. G: C. Needham. Phil., American Baptist Pub. Soc., [1894.] 3-69 p. T. pap., 5 c. [2384

Previous to the formation of the Rugby Union the English public schools all possessed rules and variations of play framed to suit any peculiarity of ground or handed down by tradition to which the alumni of separate schools adhered in after years. This led to no end of disputes and difficulties. The commencement of the present style of play dates from the season 1878-1879. Gives laws, by-laws, and definition of terms of the Rugby Union.

Müller, C. C. Tables for the writing of exercises in the study of harmony; arranged in conformity with S. Sechter's "Fundamental harmonies," and adapted for the New York College of Music. 2d ser., Harmonization of melodies. 2d ed. N. Y., W: A. Pond & Co., 25 Union Sq., 1894. 32 p. obl. D. pap., 50 c. [2391

The first edition was exhausted in six months, and has received high praise from well-known American teachers. The author judges the best method to study harmony, next to practice of chord-connection, is to harmonize melodies by finding both the bass and middle voices. He has harmonized many melodies in full so the student may learn in how many ways the same subject may be introduced. His object is to teach harmony, not the writing of tunes.

Nichols, Herbert, and Parsons, W: E. Our notions of number and space. Bost., Ginn & Co., 1894. c. 6+201 p. D. cl., $1.10. [2396

Through comparison of the different constants and variables in certain judgments, which the author subjects to experimental proof and analysis, he aims to discover somewhat of the fundamental laws governing the past and present formation of our judgments and of the movements of mental processes in general. The notions of number and space are illustrated by a system of cards and pins applied to different portions of the skin, and the verdicts of different people about the sensations produced are mathematically stated.

The results of original experiments and investigations carried on in German hospitals are published in the medical papers of Vienna, Berlin, Leipsic, Munich, etc., and it is almost a necessity that a medical student desiring to keep abreast of his profession should be able to read such reports. This system of learning German is compiled for the special purpose of familiarizing English-speaking medical men in the most rapid manner with the technical phraseology. A system of phonetic spelling makes clear the pronunciation.

Pool, Maria Louise. Out of step: a novel. N. Y., Harper, 1894. c. 3+300 p. D. cl., $1.25. [2400

A sequel to "The two Salomes." The strangely fascinating heroine is again introduced among her New England surroundings, again struggling to live a conscientious life. Her dual nature again leads her to erratic actions, and the consequences are far-reaching. The author gives us another glimpse of Mrs. Keats Bradford, who has become a celebrated portrait painter, and begs permission to paint the beautiful Salome. Her picture startles Salome's husband, showing him his wife's perverted nature as he has never before realized it.

JOURNALISTIC NOTES.

The News-Trade succeeds to the Newsdealer and Stationer, which has been discontinued.

The Chicago Magazine, formerly Current Topics, began its fourth volume with the July issue.

The Magazine of American History will be revived by the Patriot Pub. Co. Gen. O. O. Howard, U. S. A., is the new editor-in-chief. Publication will be resumed with the September number.

THE SPIRIT OF '76 PUBLISHING COMPANY, of New York City, has been incorporated to publish a monthly magazine devoted to the news and interests of patriotic societies, whose members can trace ancestors who served in the War for Independence and the colonial wars.

IT is announced that John W. Lovell has obtained the controlling interest in Godey's Magazine, and that he is now the treasurer of that company, and Theodore L. Peters, secretary. E. B. Condon has resigned. Thus again John W. Lovell enters the publishing arena, and under such conditions he is sure to become a conspicuous figure, if not in one way, then in another.

AT the age of seventy-six years, and just after a long illness, George Jacob Holyoake is helping to bring out a new penny monthly, called Labour Copartnership, and devoted to the principle of "copartnership," which claims to end the conflict of capital and labor by giving to the worker a share of profit as dividend or bonus on his wages. The journal is published by the Labour Association, of John Street, Adelphi, London, Eng.

THE THREE-VOLUME-NOVEL DISCUSSION IN ENGLAND.

THE future of the three-volume novel, for so long an established British "institution," is just at present in a rather precarious state. Its abolition and the adoption of the more sensible, convenient, and cheaper one-volume form has lately become a prevailing topic of controversy and discussion in the English book world. The matter originated in a circular issued to the London publishing trade by Messrs. Mudie and W. H. Smith & Son, the owners of the two great English circulating subscription libraries. In this circular Messrs. Mudie and Smith requested publishers to reduce their charges for three-volume novels by three shillings and to agree "not to issue cheaper editions of novels and other books which have been taken for library circulation, within twelve months from the date of publication." The reason for this request, or rather demand, is found in the fact that the profits of the leading circulating libraries have become of late much reduced, owing probably to reduction of subscriptions on account of competition. The proprietors claim that they must be able to obtain their books at a cheaper rate, hence the request for an additional discount of three shillings. The proviso prohibiting the publication of cheap editions within a year is evidently intended to postpone the issue of cheap one-volume reprints of popular books until after the expensive three-volume edition has brought in a profit to the libraries. There is no doubt that the circulating libraries favor the three-volume form. They have in fact been the main cause of its long survival. In the circular alluded to there is no hint at its abolition; the desire of the Messrs. Mudie seems to be solely to keep the three volumes, but to have them cheaper, and at the same time to put off the one-volume edition until the three have had their day. But the circular has precipitated an animated discussion, which seems to show a strong popular desire for the abolition of the old-fashioned and cumbersome form of publication.

The London Booksellers' Society has issued a circular to publishers, commenting on the Mudie-Smith proposition, as to which they express "unqualified disapproval," suggesting that "some degree of reticence be observed as to trade terms for books," and stating that "as the whole question of three-volume novels is now being raised, we should like to say that it would be a great satisfaction to us if good works of fiction ceased to be issued in this way." They propose instead that such works be issued in six-shilling form, "or at any rate at some popular price." The English Society of Authors is also in the field with a resolution passed at a special meeting called to consider the question, in which it is stated that "after taking the opinion of several eminent novelists and other members of the society, and finding them almost unanimously opposed to the continuance of the three-volume system," the society "considers that the disadvantages of that system to authors and to the public far outweigh its advantages; that for the convenience of the public, as well as for the widest possible circulation of a novel, it is desirable that the artificial form of edition produced for a small body of readers only be now abandoned, and that the whole of the reading public should be placed at the outset in possession of the work at a moderate price."

Between libraries, publishers, booksellers, authors, and the public, the matter seems in the way of being thoroughly threshed out, and it will be surprising if the discussion does not result in making the three-volume novel a thing of the past. The Westminster Gazette, commenting on the matter, remarks: "There are some institutions which, if touched at all, are liable to collapse altogether, and this peculiar product of English literature may yet prove one of them. If the question concerned no one except the libraries and the publishers, it could, no doubt, be settled to their mutual advantage. But three other classes have appeared on the scene—the authors, the booksellers, and the public—and at the present moment there are signs of a conspiracy between these three to abolish the three volumes altogether. If that should succeed, Messrs. Mudie may perhaps wish that they had not spoken."

WE note that the Public Documents Bill, so long pending in House and Senate, has at length passed the Senate and with Senate amendments gone back to the House, where it is now in conference. It is sincerely to be hoped that the conferees will report promptly and favorably, that the bill may be at once put through the House, and that a measure of so much importance to the libraries of the country, and to the book trade, too, for that matter, as well as to all interested in the publications of the government, may become a law without further delay.

INTERNATIONAL EXPOSITION OF THE BOOK AND PAPER INDUSTRIES.

THE International Exposition of the Book and Paper Industries in the Palais de l'Industrie, Paris, was officially opened on Monday, July 23, by M. Seignouret, chairman of the committee of arrangements, accompanied by several well-known officials and the presidents and chairmen of societies and committees taking part in the exposition. M. Seignouret made a happy speech of welcome, thanking the many French and foreign exhibitors for their efforts to make the exposition a representative success. After this the visitors proceeded to examine the treasures on exhibition. Their attention was first called to the book offered by the ladies of Russia to Mme. Carnot in remembrance of the Franco-Russian festivities, which forms a feature of the Russian exhibit. It is a sumptuous work of art, with its silver trimmings, its pearls and precious stones. The collective exhibition of bookbinding was then visited, M. J. Lemale doing the honors in the absence of M. Léon Gruel, president of the Chambre Syndicale de la Reliure; and ascending the stairs the Collective Exposition of Le Cercle de la Librairie claimed delighted attention for its organization and most satisfactory display. Other collections visited were those of the Syndicat de la Presse Périodique; of l'Alliance française; of l'Industrie du papier peint; of the Société des enlumineurs et miniaturistes français. The exposition of original drawings, and of the engravings and plates of the Society of the Friends of Art were especially interesting to the visitors. After visiting the section devoted to the blind, where specimens of all books used in their education were exposed, the visitors reached the Belgian section, which will be one of the most complete and most interesting exhibits in a short time. The Central Union of Decorative Art exhibited the prize designs for bindings, and the Society for the Propagation of Books as Works of Art again sent the exposition shown in 1892 at the Cercle de la Librairie. The Gutenberg exhibit and several others made time fly quickly, and it was late in the afternoon when a welcome lunch terminated the enjoyment and congratulations of hosts and guests.

THE JAPANESE AS PRINTERS.

ACCORDING to a statement made in a recent lecture by Shugeo, a noted Japanese savant, the oldest Japanese manuscripts, like those of Europe in the Middle Ages, were highly decorated with miniatures, capitals, and other ornamentation. The art of printing was introduced into Japan from China. The oldest printing from movable type dates from 770 A.D. A copy of this publication is still extant. The first printing of wood-engravings dates from 1328, the first impression made with colors from 1695. At the present time Japanese publishers generally print only on one page of the sheet. The native paper is very strong, but papers of a poorer grade, imported from abroad, are now beginning to be used. The cover for ordinary books is made out of the same kind of paper, and on it are printed the title of the book, the date, edition, and name of publisher. In the case of more valuable books, the covers are of cloth or silk. In more recent times books are also being bound after the European fashion.

COPYRIGHT MATTERS.

LITTLETON VS. THE OLIVER DITSON CO.

AFTER two years' litigation a decision has been handed down by Judge Colt, of the United States Circuit Court, Boston, August 2, in the case of Alfred H. Littleton et al. against the Oliver Ditson Company, involving a question under the copyright act of March 3, 1891. The complainants, subjects of Great Britain, asked for an injunction to restrain the Oliver Ditson Company from printing three songs which they have copyrighted, two of which are in the form of sheet music and one a cantata consisting of some ninety pages of sheet music, bound together in book form and with a paper cover. Two of these pieces were printed from electrotype plates and one from stone by the lithographic process. The inquiry in this case was whether a musical composition is a book or lithograph within the meaning of the provision of section 3 of the act. Judge Colt says: "Looking at the natural reading of the statute, the intent of Congress, and the rules which govern the construction of statute law, I am of opinion that the plaintiffs have complied with the provisions of the act of March 3, 1891, respecting the three musical compositions complained of, and that the defendant should be enjoined from reprinting and publishing or exposing for sale these compositions, or any essential part of them, as prayed for in the bill." Injunction granted.

THE DRAMATIC COPYRIGHT BILL.

EVERYTHING looked favorable for a speedy passage of the Copyright bill to punish the play pirates, and the Patent Committee of the House had decided to call it up for action on the 4th inst., but a fact has developed since that may cause considerable delay—the measure has not the unanimous support of the Patent Committee. One of the members stated that he was unalterably opposed to the bill in the present form, and that he would resort to every parliamentary tactic to prevent its passage when called up, being strongly opposed to the feature making infringement of copyrights a crime punishable by imprisonment. In view of this opposition the chairman of the committee, Representative Covert, has called another meeting of the committee to amend it so as to make it acceptable to its opponents on the committee, but at the same time not to weaken it. It has been agreed that all the penal features shall be stricken out. A clause is substituted making plain the power of marshals to serve injunctions and processes of the United States courts against violations of the law in any district of the United States.

OBITUARY NOTES.

FRANCIS H. UNDERWOOD, United States Consul at Leith, Scotland, died on the 7th inst. Dr. Underwood was born in Enfield, Mass., January 12, 1825. He was partly educated at Amherst, and afterward read law and was admitted to the bar in Kentucky. He returned to Massachusetts in 1850 and took an active part in the anti-slavery cause. He was clerk of the Massachusetts Senate in 1852, and was literary adviser to the publishing firm of Phillips, Sampson & Co. He conceived the idea of uniting the literary force of the North in the Free-Soil movement by means of a magazine, and after several years of effort was the means of securing the eminent writers who made the fame of The Atlantic Monthly. He assisted in the management of that magazine for two years, and in 1859 was elected clerk of the Superior Court in Boston, holding the place for eleven years. In 1885 he was appointed consul to Glasgow. Some years later he was transferred to Leith, where he died. He delivered lectures on "American Men of Letters," and his occasional speeches, such as that before the Glasgow Ayrshire Society on "The Memory of Burns," were much admired. Among his published works are "Handbook of English Literature," "Handbook of American Literature," "Cloud Pictures," "Lord of Himself," and "Man Proposes," two novels; "The True Story of Exodus," and biographical sketches of Longfellow, Lowell, and Whittier.

DR. JAMES STRONG died in Round Lake, N. Y., on the 7th inst., aged seventy-nine. Dr. Strong was reputed to be the most eminent Biblical and Hebraic scholar in the United States. He held the degree of Doctor of Sacred Theology, as well as LL.D., but he was not a reverend. He was a member of the Anglo-American Commission to revise the English version of the Bible in 1881. He recently completed a Biblical concordance which has been asserted to be the most exhaustive ever attempted, and which engaged him for thirty-six years. He published also "Harmony and Exposition of the Gospels," and a similar work in Greek, a Hebrew and a Greek grammar, and was joint editor with Dr. McClintock in the massive cyclopædia of "Biblical, Theological, and Ecclesiastical Literature."

DE WITT C. LENT, for many years connected with the New York book trade, died on the 5th inst.

NOTES ON AUTHORS.

"OUIDA" is about to publish a new tale, to be called "The Silver Christ."

STOPFORD BROOKE has accepted the Lowell Lectureship this fall. His subject will be "Modern English Literature."

GOUNOD'S journal will be published soon. In the same volume will appear a selection from his correspondence, now in the hands of Mme. Gounod and her son.

JAMES BARRIE was recently married to Miss Mary Ansell, the young actress who scored a decided hit in the leading female rôle of Mr. Barrie's play, "Walker, London," during its long run in England.

JAMES FORD RHODES is busily engaged on the third volume of his "History of the United States, from the Compromise of 1850," which Harper & Brothers are expecting to publish during the coming season.

BLISS CARMAN, the Canadian poet, who was formerly literary editor of the New York Independent, and assistant editor of Current Literature, has recently been appointed editor of The Chap-Book, the periodical published by Stone & Kimball.

IN a letter written from Florence in 1860, Robert Browning spoke in enthusiastic terms of the liberal treatment his wife received from American publishers. They paid her $100 apiece for her poems, and offered $2600 a year for an amount of labor that would have cost his wife and himself only a single morning a week.

OSCAR WILDE'S forthcoming book proclaims his belief that he has solved the mystery of Shakespeare's sonnets, and presents his solution. It is entitled "The Incomparable and Ingenious History of Mr. W. H., Being the True Secret of Shakespeare's Sonnets, Now for the First Time Here Truly Set Forth." The initial letters and cover designs are by Charles Ricketts.

MRS. HELEN CAMPBELL, now Associate Professor in the School of Economics of the University of Wisconsin, will shortly enter upon the associate-editorship and ownership of The Impress, a paper which Mrs. Charlotte Perkins Stetson has edited, thus far, as the organ of the Pacific Coast Woman's Press Association. With the September number the paper becomes a sixteen-page weekly, and will address itself to the general public. Mrs. Stetson will remain its editor.

ACCORDING to the New York Independent, Paul Sabatier, the author of the new life of "St. Francis of Assisi," has had an instructive experience with the authorities of the Vatican. His work has been placed on the list of prohibited books by the Index Congregation at Rome, which consists largely of cardinals. The decree was published on June 8. Now it appears that this book, which was pronounced heretical by the Congregation, had before this already secured the blessing of the Pope, to whom a copy had been sent, and that this blessing had been conveyed to Sabatier by the Papal Secretary, Cardinal Rampolla, who, doubtless, was unaware of the fact that the author was a Protestant pastor.

LITERARY AND TRADE NOTES.

WARD, LOCK & BOWDEN, LTD., will publish Fergus Hume's new novel, "The Dwarf's Chamber." They will also issue in volume form the short stories which Mr. Hume has contributed to the English Illustrated Magazine, the Idler, and Ludgate Monthly.

THE AMERICAN BOOK CO. has published four new books, nos. 8–11, in their Spencerian System of Penmanship. The books are to be helpful to the young scholar informing himself on the proper form of writing business letters, filling out bills, drafts, checks, and other business forms, and in acquiring the rudiments of bookkeeping, besides continuing his penmanship on a larger scale.

T. FISHER UNWIN has arranged to publish a translation of Prof. Villari's "Storia di Firenze." The work (part of which has already appeared in the Italian) will be comprised in two volumes and give a general history of all the political revolutions of Florence, together with that of the numerous constitutions and forms of government, from the origin of the commune to a period a little later than the death of Dante. The first volume will appear in the fall.

WHAT promises to be a volume specially interesting to book-lovers is in course of preparation by W. Roberts, the editor of The Bookworm. It is to be called "A Book-Hunter in London: historical and personal studies of book-collectors and book-collecting." It will tell the story of the author's many years of inveterate book-hunting, and will be rich in historical notes on book-hunters and thieves, collectors, catalogues, and prices. It is to have many illustrations.

GINN & Co. will publish at once "Citizenship: a book for classes in government and law," by Julius H. Seelye, late president of Amherst College. This little book lays down, in the first place, the general foundation of all government, and then sets forth the general principles of both international and national law, under national law especially confining itself to the public and private law of the United States of America. The discussion is throughout very compact but at the same time clear and comprehensive.

LOVELL, CORYELL & Co. will issue this fall a handsome edition of "The Last Days of Pompeii," with views of the excavations, landscapes, and reproductions of famous paintings. The same firm will also publish an édition de luxe of Mrs. Oliphant's "Victorian Age of English Literature," with portraits of the principal writers considered. Mrs. Oliphant's articles now appearing in the Cen'ury Magazine, which deal with "The Reign of Queen Anne," will be published as a holiday book with this title, with a number of engravings on wood.

"IT may not be generally known," says the London Literary World, "that George Meredith is still chief literary adviser to Chapman & Hall. It was he who discovered Olive Schreiner. Mr. Meredith, unlike most of the leading novelists, is a strong Home Ruler. His daughter, who is a very familiar figure in society, is about to marry a brother of Mr. Julian Sturgis." It is in "A Daughter of To-Day" that the novelist Jasper, whom Elfrida makes so uncomfortable by a theatrical outburst of admiration, reads for the publishers Elfrida's book and decides upon it adversely; which goes to justify the assertion that Miss Duncan had Mr. Meredith in mind when she studied the character.

M. SPIRGATIS, the antiquarian bookseller of Leipzig, is rendering valuable service to the antiquarian and bibliographer in publishing a series of "Seltene Drucke" (rare imprints). These are fac-simile reproductions of exceedingly rare, and to some extent little-known incunabulæ, accompanied with explanatory text and bibliographies by Karl Schorbach, whose work is done in a scholarly and most satisfactory manner. The works so far issued are: "Die historien von dem ritter Beringer," Strassburg, 1495, 16+12 p. 24°; and "Dietrich von Bern (Sigenot)," Heidelberg, 1490, 2+16+44 p. 4°. The editions of these reproductions are limited to one hundred copies.

NOTES ON CATALOGUES.

MR. WISE'S forthcoming "Bibliography of the Works of Robert Browning" will appear in the first instance in the columns of the London Athenæum, and will subsequently be issued to private subscribers in half-crown parts. Only the barest outline will be printed in the Athenæum; collations of the editiones principes, and a list of such poems and letters as have appeared separately in periodical publications, being followed by an account of the numerous books and pamphlets concerning Browning and his writings, which almost form a library of themselves.

"Never before has the Art of Taxidermy had its practical methods and beauties portrayed as we find them interpreted in this work."

DAVIE'S

Methods in the Art of Taxidermy

In one 4to vol., silk cloth, gilt top, uncut edges, $10.00.

Containing ninety full-page engravings, over five hundred figures minutely illustrating the most practical methods practiced in the art. It teaches in detail, step by step, the skinning and stuffing of birds, mammals, crustaceans, fishes, and reptiles, together with illustrations of forms and attitudes of the animal kingdom. The text is by Oliver Davie, who has made Taxidermy his life study and profession. The originals of the illustrations were made in India ink from time to time as the actual subjects could be obtained from which to make the various procedures. They were drawn by the eminent bird and mammal artist, Theodore Jasper, A.M., M.D., whose experience in the Art of Taxidermy extends over a period of fifty years. Every illustration by this artist is a work of art. Among these engravings are included reproductions from photographs of actual work by American Taxidermists.

We have just published this great work and offer it the trade at a liberal discount.
